

Speak. No Silence.

Whether it's domestic, abusive or emotional violence,
Being a teen who face these problems are often silenced.
See the pressure is an addictive demon, hard to flee
Teen violence tours the earth like life lost meaning, you see,
It's hard to reason with or even deal with
They Prey on whomever, however, whenever that feeling gets a chance
To come out the closet and take a stance
It becomes too late for them to say... they're caught.

Why is it so hard to put an end to this?
We're losing them to his game, sins wrath that laughter to the non-caring ears
When a soul is taken another is attacked, through their so-called peers.
Un-noticed to the other teens eyes the parents try,
With all their might
To teach their kids the right way to fight,
Through courage and light
But a little gangster talk could blur their sight
Blur their future like a black eye in a fist fight
They struggle as the rage impacts
The violence is raising its bars detaching from society, disjoining the facts.

But together we can encourage those who have been struck with violence,
That it takes a lot of courage to change, but with a little guidance
They can make a difference in their own lives... speak. No more silence.
